any one who takes an interest in the affairs - Our Macao contemporary hears that permission of the Colony will find the ones we now propose to give well worth study. In Saturday's Garette was published the report of the Superintendent of Police, together with the returns annexed. One of these is a comparative return of cases reported to the Palice for three years. In view of the GOVERNOR's remark above quoted we were led to look at the same return attached to previous reports, and we now give the figures for three periods of three years each, namely, 1869-71, 1873-75, and 1879-81 :---

SERIOUS OFFENCES. 1869 1870 1871 1873 1874 1875 1879 1880 188 967 1,357 1,434 1,316 1,165 1,335 2,337 ,051 2,329

It was to serious crimes only that Sir Jon: POPE HENNESSY referred, but in order make the case complete we give also the number of minor offences reported.

So far, therefore, from crime having di-1.107 phones, and gives reference to ever 2,000 minished, as Sir John Pope Hennessy assorts, it appears that in the last year of his administration the number of serious offences by some half-dozen robbers, one of whom was reported was no less than 66.95 per cent. more than during the year immediately preceding and pistols, of which they made free use. The number of minor will take place on Thursday next, the 23rd offences reported in 1881 also shows an increase on the number-reported in 1875, but we attach little importance to this branch of the subject, because the "minor offences" include that large class of cases which are merely offences against municipal regulations and not crimes in the proper sense of the word at all. It is the serious offences which show the real state of crime in the colony. The figures we have given speak for themselves, and but little comment is needed. One interesting oustom in connexion with the early history of a Burmese child takes its names from the plant which is from one of the audience. The Indian hasket employed on the occasion. In China when a child is a month old its head is shaved, and name given; but in Burmah the ceremony often takes place when the child is a week old. On this occasion the head is washed with a decoction of the pods of the sonp acacia (Acacia rugata), known in Burmah as Kindwon The intimate friends and relatives of the parents assemble, as in most other countries, to congratulate the parents, bringing with them various kinds of presents; the decection is taken by the midwife and employed in the ceremony of wash ing the head of the infant, when the guests also employ the same wash for their hands. This vessel has been built by the passing time. Thus where betel, ten, rice, &c., are employed a number of expressions connected with them are found bearing on the question of time. We have recently read somewhere that in some Eastern countries a person entering the presence of a king, prince, or other official personage should not begin to speak until sufficient time has passed to allow of the chewing of a guid of betel. Now in Burmah we find that time is often determined by such expressions as "the boiling of a pot of rice" or, say, fifteen minutes; or of two pots for

It seems to have been customary for ages in some countries to associate trees with theatres. Thus we learn that at Epidaurus in Greece, where antiquarian researches have recently been carried out, the theatre of Æsculapius has been discovered. This was one of the most celebrated theatres of antiquity, and was capable of holding the Thaiping glided easily and gracefully into the | 30,000 spectators. The map of transmitted to posterity, nor do any of the Clasma Ch'ien when compiling his History never commentators have thought differently, and we maps, poorly done, of China in the successive periods of the Hein, the Shang and the Chou. His successor in wearing the mantle of the his. toric muse was Panke, but he, though he mentions a map of North-western China, does not include it in his work. There were, then, maps in the Han dynasty which have not come down to us. The geographical works belonging to that time and the next few centuries contain no maps in any accessible editions. The first maps that have been retained in modern editions of ancient books are those of the Sung dynasty. and they seem to be connected with the invention of printing, which dates from A.D. 932. It was the influence of foreign countries which map-making in the Sung dynasty. The Buddhists began to compile works with maps of India and the countries through which the coutes lay to India. In one of their larger works, historical and biographical, the Fo-tsu-tung-chi. there is a map of China as it was in the Sang dynasty when the Yellow River entered the Gulf of Pechibli at nearly the same point as at present. Then follows a map of Western countries, including Persia and Rome according to the geography of the Han dynasty. Then there is a map of India as known to the Bud-West. There is a coast line on the West are Persia and the to the North of these lie the Turks. There is another coast line running east from Arabia to Coylon, in a line nearly straight. It then passes the Indian Po-to, sacred to Kuan-yin, and easterly direction. The Arabian Sea, the Gulf of Persia and the Bay of Bengal, are ignored entirely. Setween Burma and Cambudia occurs. of Asia, and in this Bay are seen Java and the other islands of the Eastern Archipelage. The The defendant said a lamp trimmer on board | coast line resumes its easterly direction at Camcould to teach geography to the Chinese after maps were a little better than those of the Buddhists, but not much so. All through the Sung dynasty till the 13th century when the Mongola established their empire. Chinese scholars suffered from imperfect views of geography, and failed to obtain clear ideas either of foreign countries or of their own in regard to topography. During the Mongol domination many Europeans visited China and brought with them a certain portion of geographical knowledge. No steps, however, were taken by the Government to improve maps and common geographical books, while it is also true that more names of countries and historical facts respecting them found their way into the compilations of the dynastic historians. The same is the case with the Ming dynasty. The Portuguese came to Macaound the paniards to Manila. The Japanese made raids of a piratical nature on the coast. The attention of the Government and the governing class was drawn to foreign countries, and restrictive laws were put in operation forbidding foreigners to reside in China. The maps of that period were as poor as before. This might be expected, for ignorance and exclusiveness usually go hand in hand. The Chinese had had junks in the Indian ocean from the 5th century, yet in the 16th century we find in maps of that time that Cam- --bodis and Siam are islands, that Java lies to the west of Siam, that the Greek empire (Fu-lin) Arabia and Medina are three small islands a little to the west of Java, and that an immense southern continent fringes the man from a little south of Ceylon to a point not far south of Java, and again farther east. The distorted maps of the Sung and Ming periods are retained to the present day, because they were engraved on wood.

Good mans have only existed since the Jesuit to the present dynasty. The Emperors of the periods Kang-hai and Chien-lung both encouraged the survey of their dominions and the construction of good mans. Danville's Atlas Chinois is the result in French of the surveys made under Kang-hai by Gerbillon and his companions. All European maps of China rest mainly on those surveys. The Emperor himself had two motives. He was partly influenced by scientific interest, but chiefly by dynastic considerations. He had subdued to peace a wide empire, and it was an adventage to have a good man of all the conntries composing his dominions. Through the combined effect of the love of knowledge and the love of power working in one clear thinking mind. Europe came to know the geography of the Chinese empire. When the Government had good mans, a few copies of which spread among the official class, the officers and wealthy persons among the people bogan to make better maps for sale in the large cities. Among the atlases of the empire which have been issued by ernor of Honan deserves special commendation. It is on a large scale. Each square of 200 li represents a square degree. Two inches and a half represent two hundred li. Thus there is abundant space for names, and these are freely inserted on the most frequented roads. As a specimen of engraving it is rough, and of course being on wood and done by provincial workmen it cannot equal the copper-plate maps which were issued last century from the Government workshops in Peking. But it is in comparison with past time a great advantage to the people to have a map on a largo scale for four or five dollars, on which both deordinary use. For this they are indebted to Kang-hei and the Jesuits. This map was printed at Hankow by the late Vicercy Kunn Wen .-

PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore charac-

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration :-

Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000

Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chiuese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-estions and equivalents of different words which the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted.

To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionsupersedes all previous editions. No responsibility can be accepted in this Department for erroneous replies to verbal enquiries. or to notes addressed to subordinate officers. The shroffs told off to sell stamps should especially not be regarded as able to give correct information. The Postal Guide alone is the standard on all points on which such information may be MAILS BY THE BRITISH PACKET.

Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the box- is fastened with sealing war, but there is no impression of a scal. The attention of boxholders is called to the necessity of carefully sealing such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whether the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office: the emission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps.

Persons who send Musters of Ten through the Post in Tine are requested to have themmade flat or square instead of round, as it is impossible to pack round tins securely in the mail bags. It is believed that the tea will travel more safely in flat tins, which are not so-liable: as round ones to be bulged in. 4 by 3 by 14 inches is suggested as a good size. The tips should not have sharp corners.
